February 1, 2013

This week was a busy week! We had the 100th day and wrote about what we think we will be like when we are 100 years old. We also made artwork of ourselves as if we were 100 years old using cotton balls, construction paper, and all sorts of goodies. They are adorable and also hilarious!

We learned about letter writing and we even wrote a letter to President Obama. We will be revising and editing it and send it off next week. I know we are all excited to see if there will be a reply. Next week, we will get to write to our favorite Disney character and send them out after completing the writing process.

We will continue to learn about streets, maps, and the Post Office for the next two weeks and we will begin actual Post Office jobs next week during our writing workshop. Students will be able to buy stamps to mail our their letters and post cards from our class Post Office. We are very excited to start this. If you happen to have any postage stamps, we would really appreciate you sending them in so that we can actually mail them out.

Thank you for all you continue to do parents!
